Re: RM-11683, IB Docket No. 12-340, Reply Period

Dear Chairman Genachowski:

I write today, during the Reply Period, to urge the FCC to grant the pending application of LightSquared for a license modification that would allow it to move forward in providing a revolutionary new 4G cellular telephone and wireless broadband system. As I said in my earlier letter, I work with Jubilee Jobs, a Lexington-based organization that helps people who have been through problems in their lives find new jobs, and move their lives forward. Our work is made easier when we can contact people by cell phone and communicate with them on mobile devices.

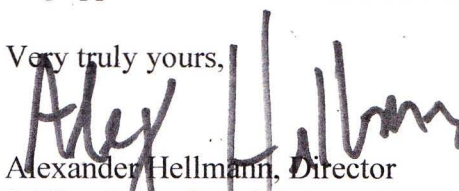

And, as some of the comments made by companies who operate in the online financial services industry point out, online financial services for lower income people, such as the ones we serve, can make their lives easier as well.

"For example, LightSquared's planned network would make possible at a real affordable cost the m-banco financial services for the bottom of the Pyramid citizens," m-banco, a provider of financial services to a primarily low income market, wrote. Likewise, Assist Wireless, which provides telecommunications services to low income citizens, wrote that "LightSquared's planned network would offer more voice and data services and options to our end users."

I deal with low income people, and people down on their luck every day. Many of them live in rural areas. Companies like m-banco and Assist Wireless, along with many other such companies, provide services which make their lives a little easier. Those services would become even cheaper and more easily available if LightSquared can implement its proposed network.

I see LightSquared's proposal as a win-win situation for everyone involved. Therefore, I strongly urge the FCC to approve LightSquared's pending application for a license modification.

Very truly yours,

Alexander Hellmann, Director
Jubilee Jobs of Lexington
